

Technicians'
Corner

January 9 2008

The new year is here and we are still waiting on a rain. Hope everyone had a good holiday season.

As reported last time water levels are mixed. Some of this is due to irrigation pumps coming on for winter wheat due to little rain over the last few months. I expect to see mixed water levels the end of this month with more irrigation pumps running. A good rain now would really help the aquifer both on recharge and reduced pumping.

I have been locating wells the last week or so in southern Tom Green and have finished up in 3 grid squares. I should be starting back up into northern Tom Green and western Runnels the next few weeks.

Sincerely yours
Finis Allen